Halloweentown 3 trailer

Today marks the first day of October, and therefore the first day of my long-awaited countdown to Halloween (yes - I have a calendar and everything). Oh Halloween, you are everything to me and I am unabashed in my love for you, as well as the things you bring to the table every year. Such as your excessive amounts of candy, costumes and good movies. Because really, is there anything better than celebrating this holiday by lounging around, eating large amounts of candy corn, and re-watching all the best creepy movies from your childhood? OK, actually not creepy movies, because to be honest, they were scary - but creepy movies like Hocus Pocus, Nightmare Before Christmas, and my all time favorite, Disney's amazing Halloweentown series. The Halloweentown series consisted of four Disney Channel Original Movies that aired during 1998 and 2006: Halloweentown, Halloweentown II: Kalabar's Revenge, Halloweentown High, and the penultimate, Return to Halloweentown. The movies gave us everything a gal could ever have wanted from a children's Halloween franchise. A protagonist who learns that she's a witch? Check. Villains and love interests? Check and check. An alternate universe where witches/skellingtons/gosers come to life, but which also at the same time looks like the happiest place on earth? Super check. Yes, the Halloweentown series was so good... it was scary. If I haven't already convinced you, here are seven other reasons why the Halloweentown series deserves a marathon, just like right now. (Or at least before Halloween.) 1. Halloweentown is the largest city Ever! Halloweentown, it is always HALLOWEEN. Just let it sink in for a minute. 2. Marrie really understands your love for Halloween! People can call your love of Halloween strange or even borderline unhealthy, but y'know who gets you? Halloweentown protagonist and OG Halloween spokesperson, Marrie Piper. Bless you, Marrie. 3. Marrie's Grandma is everything you ever wanted out of a Grandma! Agatha Aggie Cromwell was the dopest grandmother ever. She's the queen of Halloweentown, and carries around a bottomless bag that produces what you want from it. Like, what? 4. For Costume Ideas! Ne ideas on how to be a witch/skellington/jack-o-lantern/something Halloween related? You have this series covered. 5. The graphics were terrible, but that's what makes it so wonderful to see it again. 6. For The Feel Good Lessons! Films always had one key message: It's OK to be different. 7. ... And finally, For Nostalgia "bursts into tears"! Thank you Halloweentown, for being the most defining Halloween series of my childhood. Photos: Disney Channel Productions; darshanapathak/Tumblr; Giphy (6) Dub Box USA Fans of classic camper vans will turn over the Dinky Dub travel trailer of Dub Box USA. Weighing just 1,000 pounds - superlights for a long-towed caravan - this vintage-inspired RV perfect for those looking for something bigger than a regular tear-discharge camper. Equipped with an expanding queen-sized queen-sized Area, and plenty of storage space, Dinky Dub also offers extra options like an awning over hatchback and portable water tank. Base price: $13,000. Continue to 5 of 8 below. Halloweentown still delighted Disney Channel fans in 1998, so much so that it went on to spawn three sequels (but I probably don't have to tell any true fan that). Later, when the franchise ended in 2006, the actors all went their separate ways, and now, in 2019, the cast of Halloweentown does all very different things. Some of them are still trading, but some of them left the company altogether. And they have long since grown up and away from their little child characters. The original film followed Piper's family children, who had recently discovered they had magical powers. They soon went to Halloweentown, where all the supernatural beings live, and met their grandmother Aggie (Debbie Reynolds), unlike their mother. Aggie encouraged the Piper children to take their strengths. And together they helped prevent an evil villain from taking over the mortal kingdom. The film was a hit with audiences back then, and it's still a Halloween staple to this day. After Halloweentown came Halloweentown II: Kalabar's Revenge in 2001, Halloweentown High in 2004, and the final franchise installment, Return to Halloweentown in 2006. Not all of the same cast members implemented for each successor. Leading protagonist Marrie was infamously recast for the fourth film, and other characters were killed or not mentioned after the first one or two films. But what's in the past is in the past: Here's where all the original Halloweentown stars are today. As everyone else says, do it at your own risk. I saw an old golf bag carrier at the thrift store for $6 and prepared this project with materials in my garage. I removed all the plastic bag holding things, straightened the kick out of the lower end, and shortened up the handle and re-fixed it with self-cutting metal screws. I love them for projects. I had some extruded T aluminum and made the frame out of it. At first I tried aluminum solder, but when I worked a joint popped and I took screws and I drilled a tapped J/4-20 long screws and through bolted it. I reinforced the frame with struts fit into the cart frame of the wheels. I built a bed out of corrugated plastic light panels. I had to splice a piece with clear 2 inch tape to make it fill the bed. I attached this with 3M industrial spray glue. I prepared the universal joint incorporating hallow handles, manufactured U piece through bolted with 1/4-20 threaded stock and aircraft nuts for up and down movement. Attached to the U piece is an angle through bolted in the middle with 1/4-20 hardware, including aircraft nut for crouching motion. So the angle piece is through bolted to the custom center hitch on the bike for turning motion. I used a 3/8 bolt with a hole drilled at the correct height to in the nut with a quick removable hair pin for easy to hook up. This was a typical project of mine such that it was a work in progress with changes that I went along. It's not quite finished because it needs an enclosure. I am trying to acquire an old car top clam-shell cargo ship to mount on the frame and bed. The trailer rides really well and is very light weight. This is my first instructable, sorry it's not very clear. Thanks. Also I noticed comment boxes switching from my original edit. After correcting them a few times, they seem to go where they want. I have emphasized in recent months that as an economic growth cycle matures, secondary opportunities in many industries are often very profitable, recalls Jim Powell, editor of the Global Changes & Opportunities Report.Currently, several new opportunities appear in real estate as millions of millennials become successful enough to finally buy their own homes. Because most Millennials aren't as wealthy as their Generation Z parents, or their Baby Boomer grandparents, they're more likely to buy affordable-made homes in parks than they are to buy site-built homes in more upscale areas. More from Jim Powell: Five favorites for Equity InvestorsAs a result, trailer parks - as they're still often called - are no longer considered to be the black sheep in the housing industry. Instead, they become cash cows. Today's newer manufactured home parks are particularly popular because they usually offer attractive amenities. Security is at the top of the list. Most exclusive parks are actually gated communities for people who can't afford to live in one for site-built homes in more expensive areas. Many trailer parks also have swimming pools, tennis courts, dog exercise areas, meeting halls for parties, and so on. An increasing number of parks are also limited to older residents who would rather not be in a family park with children and parents coming and going all the time. A few parks go in the other direction: they cater to young families. I visited a family park on a weekend a year ago and it was pure pandemonium. I couldn't get out fast enough. Of course the kids loved it. Several large private equity funds - including Blackstone Group - have discovered the profit potential of exclusive trailer parks. We beat them all to the party when we bought Sun Communities (SUJ) in March 2014 when it was $44.31. The stock has been a top performer and is now up 185.0% to $126.27. Sun surfs the current housing trend and seems likely to keep going. It's not too late for long-term investors to buy the stock. See also: Telecom Talk: Dish to SprintLikewise, Cavco Industries (CVCV) - which we bought in January - remains attractive and has just made a big price jump. The company makes many of the innovative manufactured homes that appeal to Millennials. Cavco is still OK to buy but I will wait for the latest price to come down. I can now also recommend Equity Properties (ELS) that profit from the increasing popularity of modern trailer parks. ELS owns or manages 412 properties in 33 states and British Columbia. In total, the company has 155,133 individual installations. Equity Lifestyle is the leading operator of manufactured home communities. RV resorts and campsites in North America. The company has somewhat more upscale properties than Sun Communities and should be a good companion stock to own. Equity Lifestyle Properties also focuses on popular retirement locations and vacation destinations along canals, lakes and golf courses. In addition, the company offers many rental units, a business that most parks avoid. Equity Lifestyle Properties is prospering. For the most recent quarter, net income increased from $53.1 million, or $0.58 per share, to $113.3 million, or $1.26 per share. I think ELS will be a profitable long-term investment. More aggressive investors who would like a smaller company that operates manufactured home communities should consider UMH Properties (UMH). The company has 21,000 developed websites, primarily in the Northeast and Midwest. The company also has an attractive portfolio of REIT securities. What I find most attractive about UMH is it has a great deal of institutional support. In fact, the institutions own 62% of the company. UMH is also doing well. After eight consecutive years of double-digit growth, rentals in the first quarter and related revenues increased by 12% compared to the same period in 2018. The company has a lot of debt, but that is almost always the case for REITs who buy and develop properties to expand their business. Economist Robert ShillerBy at least one popular investment metric, U.S. stocks have only been so expensive a second time in history, and it didn't end well the first time. According to the cyclically adjusted price-to-earnings ratio - a measure of market value based on 10 years of smoothed earnings data - the S&P 500 is at its second most expensive point in history, an important dynamic to consider when looking at past valuations. For example, in 1990 the energy sector accounted for 26% of the S&P 500 and the tech sector accounted for only 8%. Today, energy has a weighting of 2%, and the technology weighs 29%. Colas said investors should not forget how much this type of composition shift can have on the overall valuation index. All sectors of the S&P 500 have its own fundamentals and thus its own valuation, he said. Benzina's Take: Smart investors never ignore critical metrics like the CAPE ratio. But smart investors also know not to rely too much on a single metric. Investors need to understand exactly how the numbers are calculated, what the numbers are and don't tell them, and what other pieces of information will complement those numbers to paint a full picture of what's happening in the market. Spacs have been one of the hottest stories to invest in 2020 and look set to be a big theme in 2021, with hundreds of potential deals that could be announced. Benzina is home to the live SPACs Attack show that airs Monday to Friday at 11 a.m. ET. On Wednesday, co-hosts Chris Kate and Mitch Hoch shared their top SPACs, trading between $10 and $11. Chris's Picks: RedBall Acquisition (NASDAQ: RBAC) has been linked to merger with Fenway Sports Group. A deal would give investors another publicly traded sports team. Fenway Sports Group owns MLB's Boston Red Sox and Liverpool Football Club in the English Premier League. Both teams have a strong brand awareness and could attract investment from fans. Another activist mentioned was media rights. A new deal with Fox Corp. (NASDAQ: FOX) looks in for MLB in 2022, and EPL is negotiating new deals as well. Fenway Sports Group also is a majority owner in a local sports media company that airs Red Sox games. Falcon Capital Acquisition (NASDAQ: FCA) is aimed at a company in the media or consumer technology sectors. The team behind the SPAC includes Jeff Sagnansky. Pick here are the following Sagnansky, who are part of the team that made offers to DraftKings Inc (NASDAQ: DKNG) and Skollz Inc (NASDAQ: SKLZ). The team behind Hyllion Holdings (NASDAQ: HYLN) has a SPAC, there could be a one below $11. Turtles Acquisition Corp. II (NASDAQ: SNPT) is aimed at the sustainability area. The story of hyllion deal could make this SPAC attractive to a target company. Hyllion shares traded above $50 and were one of the best performing SPACs earlier in 2020. Lefersin Acquisition Corp. (NASDAQ: LFRF) is targeting the fintech sector. With rumors of companies like Sofi, eToro and others going public, Fintech could be a hot sector to watch in 2021. The management team at SPAC has history with ETrade, Coinbase and TD Ameritrade. Burgundy Technology (NASDAQ: BTAQ) is a company aimed at technology or enterprise software. Management includes Leo Apotheker, the former CEO of Hewlett-Packard (NASDAQ: HPE) and SAP SE (NASDAQ: SAP). Apotheker spent over 20 years at SAP and helped transform the company from a single product to a multi-product business. Co-CEO Jim Mackey spent years at Citigroup, SAP, OpenText and Blackberry (NASDAQ: BB). While at Blackberry, Mackey helped the company switch from a mobile business to end-point management. Burgundy Technology mentions Israel as a target area in its filing. Apotheker graduated from the Hebrew University of Israel. Several large Israeli companies are targeting the 2021 IPO or SPAC deals, which could make Burgundy a good choice here. The list of rumored names includes REE Automotive, Taboola, Outbrain and eToro. Of the Benzina traders and investors surveyed, 67 per cent said Shopify would reach $2,000 per share by the end of next year. Respondents said Shopify will continue to see strength in 2021, off continued nationwide adoption of online shopping, away from traditional bricks and mortar retailers. Traders also said that even with nationwide distribution of a coronavirus vaccine already underway, the popularity of e-commerce will continue to grow. They believe U.S. consumers like to be able to shop a variety of shoppers simultaneously and have their purchases delivered to their front door. Many traders and investors also said they are keen on Shopify's UIUX, to draw attention to how the platform has a high ease-of-access for small and medium-sized retailers looking to take their business online. It should be noted the latest price target for Shopify was reported by Susquehanna on December 2. The analyst firm set a target of $950, expecting shares in the e-commerce company to fall within 12 months. Going into late 2020, Shopify shares were trading lower after the stock's recent rise, which was driven by e-commerce trends and holiday sales optimism. COVID-19 vaccine news has also driven a rotation from e-commerce names into reopening sectors such as traditional retailing and travel. Current and potential investors should take note of Shopify's fourth quarter earnings date estimated February 2. (Bloomberg) - Venezuela's government plans to move to a fully digital economy as hyperinflation has rendered worthless notes practically disappear, and dollarization expands through the local financial system. The US dollar dollar served as an escape valve for Venezuela amid U.S. sanctions and collapsed oil revenues. President Nicolas Maduro said in a televised interview with TeleSur on Friday. He said 18.6% of all commercial transactions are in dollars, while 77.3% are carried out in bolivars with debit cards. Only 3.4% are paid with bolivars notes. They have a war on our physical currency. We are moving this year to a more in-depth digital economy, in expansion. I have set a goal of an economy that is 100% digital." Maduro said, adding that physical money will eventually disappear. It is the latest ambitious currency plan from venezuela's president with no goal. In 2017, when the bolivar was in freefall, Maduro promised that the nation would create a cryptocurrency called Petro, backed by reserves of oil, gas, gold and diamonds. Petro was launched in 2018. The U.S. called it a hoax. Venezuela's currency has lost 99% of its value during three years of hyperinflation, forcing the country to issue higher denomination notes, which in turn become useless in record time. Inflation rose 5,790% in the last 12 months, according to Bloomberg News's Cafe con Leche Index. The biggest note now in circulation, 50,000 bolivars, is worth about $0.04. The government has delayed plans to issue a 100,000 bolivar bill that would currently be worth less than $0.10.Read more: Venezuela's Cafe Con Leche IndexAfter previously subsidized fuel prices were increased in June, cash is now only used to ride public transportation, and the Caracas metro routinely stops charging passengers due to a lack of cash. Since late 2019, local banks have slowly begun offering accounts and financial products in US dollars, but they remain limited as there is no clearing system in place to allow for digital transactions in US dollars. Some banks have held technical meetings with Venezuela's central bank in an effort to resolve the issue amid high skepticism and caution due to U.S. sanctions. But Maduro promised to create payment reforms that allow transactions with savings and checking accounts in U.S. dollars. A press officer at Venezuela's central bank did not immediately respond to a request for comment. Despite promising to expand the use of the U.S. dollar in the economy, Maduro said formal dollarization would not happen. Venezuela has its currency and we will defend it, he said.
